

LAWSON PRESCRIBES "CURE" FOR THE FINANCIAL TROUBLE

All the Country Has to Do, He Says, Is to Create Confidence in "Real" Wealth and Uphold Roosevelt

This is the fourth and concluding installment of Lawson's story of the panic. The fallacy of his remedy is set forth on the editorial page of this issue.

(By Thomas W. Lawson.) In summing up I submit for your consideration, and for the consideration of congress and of the American people...

Court to Try Financiers By the exposure, now, of the losses that have already been made at the disposal of the people, banks and trust companies, and the assumption of these losses, now, by those who are morally responsible for them...

Says Plan is Practicable Such a plan is entirely practicable. It can be inaugurated, under the present conditions, by the board of directors of the investigation of both questions boils down to simply this: Separation of the bad stocks and bonds from the good ones.

The War Scare

That there is something being carefully concealed in regard to the relations of Japan and the United States is self-evident.

The sudden change of front of the San Francisco officials after being hastily summoned to Washington, the preparations to send the fleet to the Pacific, the hurried work of Japan upon her navy at a time when she has a heavy war debt yet to meet, and now the sudden recalling of the Japanese ambassador cannot but indicate that some sort of tempest is brewing beneath the surface.

Nor is the complete omission of all reference to this situation in the President's message any less significant.

It is scarcely probable that the ruling class at the present time is anxious for a war with Japan.

To be sure, the Spanish-American war added the Philippines as a part of the plunder of the conflict, and these will now constitute an element of danger to peace.

The only immediate benefit that could accrue to the capitalists of the United States by a war would be the effect it would have upon working-class agitation.

Every morning in the headlines of the capitalist dailies you can see a new brand of "confidence" announced as being almost on us.

Yet we do not believe that the capitalists of America have as yet reached the position where they would welcome such a method of temporarily stopping the growth of Socialism.

Publicity of Campaign Accounts

Among the other items in his message which Roosevelt stole from the Socialist Party, and for which the Party bears him no ill will, is the proposal that contributions to campaign funds be made public.

But if Roosevelt really believes in this principle, why does he not instruct Cortelyou to make public the list of contributors to the campaign fund that elected Roosevelt?

This is one of those cases where it is easy to get a reputation for virtue without any danger of losing the joys of sin.

Lawson's Remedy

In "exposing" Thomas Lawson has few if any equals. He has a most picturesquely vivid style of writing that compels attention.

But when it comes to anything positive this shrewd, keen business man becomes silly.

Seldom has this fact been better illustrated than in his recent statement on the panic. He bared the criminal character of the great capitalists in language so vigorously true that scarcely a paper dared publish it.

But when it came to his "cure" he fell flat. To ask that Roosevelt cease from accepting dictation from the trusts and appoint some one to manage these great industries and protect the public is so foolish that one can hardly realize that the same man advised it that had just written the trenchant, keen analysis of financial affairs that preceded it.

To him the crisis is "sentimental" in its origin. He has no grasp of the underlying industrial causes that created the "System" at which he rails, and that will keep on creating such "Systems" as long as it exists.

To him there is no working class, there are no factories—only stock markets, tickers and financiers. If the "paper tithes" representing the real wealth can be restored to value, and the investors assured the right to keep on taking profits from the pockets of the workers, then Lawson is satisfied.

SOME DAY LABOR WILL TUMBLE THE WHOLE BUNCH, BIG AND LITTLE, INTO THE DITCH AND PROCEED TO KEEP ITS OWN PRODUCT, AND WILL STOP, NOT ONLY THIS PANIC, BUT ALL FUTURE ONES.

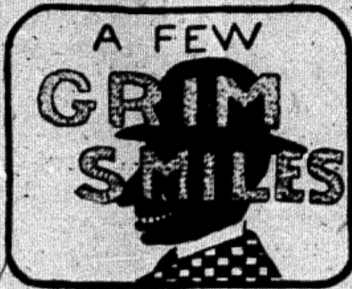

THE HERO

Nay, never failer. No great deed is done by falterers who ask for certainty. No good is certain but the steadfast mind. The undivided will to seek the good.

THE VICTIMS

BY MARY BEAL.

There was unbroken silence, save for the labored breathing of the men as the air became more oppressive and the scratching of the pencils as their work-stiffened fingers moved clumsily, but rapidly, in the rate with death.

Henry Gassaway Davis says the story is a "malicious lie." After having passed through the Parker campaign he ought not to be so sensitive.

The Relation of Socialism to the Labor Movement

Within the last week several complaints have come to this office from hard-fighting union men of persons connected with the Socialist party who are notorious scabs and whose record in the labor world is rank so far as fellowship with their brothers is concerned.

UNDESIRABLES

BY JOS. E. COHEN.

ORIENTAL IMMIGRATION

ASIATIC MUST BE EXCLUDED UNDER PRESENT SOCIETY.

What shall be done with the Asiatic laborer? I cite a few conclusions that have been reached by the Socialist Party in its program.

CAPITALISTS WANT CHEAP LABOR.

"Where ignorance is bliss 'tis folly to be wise." Now I venture the assertion that the competition of cheap labor is not a blessing but a curse.

TO THE EDITOR

Ever since this made-to-order panic set in it has caused my mind to dwell on the account of our fellow Socialists who have been thrown out of work.

There will certainly be great destitution in the cities before the factories and other productive industries open up again. In case of suffering on account of the lack of food or clothing, is there not a way to secure such even from a capitalist government?

PANIC OVER-ALL SE.ENE

Every morning in the headlines of the capitalist dailies you can see a new brand of "confidence" announced as being almost on us.

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN Edited by Marie Jayne

Don't Hoard Your Savings

Twenty miles out from Chicago, near a quiet suburb, a group of out-of-work were seated around a board table near the railroad track.

One of their number had just come from the "mill" and was editing his handout ravenously. The others had devoured what they had gathered and one was reading the newspaper the lunch had been rapped in.

"What is it about?" "Read it," "It's a letter of Rosy's to Cortelyou."

"That ain't the way to say it; it's Cor-tel-you."

"There is no article of risk involved in getting business like its natural course, and the people can help themselves and the country most by putting back into active circulation the money they are hoarding."

"How much, are you hoarding?" "Come, that's sound advice. Let's all go out our savings to the bank."

"Let's see how much I could put in," hech dives into his various pockets and bulges out the contents.

"Here's a bear check for me." "Here's a knife I found yesterday for mine."

"Here's a key to the house that used to be. I've carried it for a souvenier. Wonder where the old girl is tonight and if the young ones have anything to eat."

"See my pie. It's something I picked up in the street today. It says, 'Don't worry if you haven't got money in the bank. We loan on household furniture.' The loan sharks are ext-

An'umn Days

The autumn days are leaving us. With all their golden cheer.

The days we spent in wandering free through woodland brown and red. Where ripening nuts hang threateningly in tree tops overhead. Where a song bird trills his farewell note.

From his perch in the tree top high; And we note the call of the wild duck's brood.

And swiftly southward they fly. The little brook is whispering low. As it speeds to its ocean home.

Of the cruel ice that will bind its side When the winter days have come.

The yellow corn is gathered in. And safely stored away. While in the snow is fragrant hearse.

Is the new-mown clover hay. The apples are plucked from the orchard trees.

And placed in the cellar below. Where the pumpkin pies, and the mince-meat, too, Stand on the shelf in a row.

We see the snow clouds swiftly send Across the leaden sky. We hear the wind speak sharp and clear.

Of winter that's drawing nigh.

The Child Labor Evil
