the Chicago Lighterage company

With ten dock sites secured from the city, the Chicago Dock company's piers to be constructed at the mouth of the river would be feed with bustness drawn from the big factory and lumber districts along the river. The heart of the industrial district thus would be tapped by the company's boats.

The connection between the lighterage concern, the Pugh terminal concern and the Chicago Dock company is so close that the manipulations were apparent to the investigators, as soon as the incorporations papers of the lighterage company were examined.

The head of the Pugh Terminal and Warehouse company, is James A Pugh, the moving spirit in the lake front dock grab. His company has leased all of the lake front holding of the Chicago Dock and Canal company. It was the latter company that secured the secret federal permit, issued by the war department last February, under which it is hoped to build the three great piers at the mouth of the Chicago river, Mr. Pugh's corporation has been given this permit along with the other holdings of the dock company.

Similarity in the Permits

Similarity in the Permits

Similarity in the Permits

A marked similarity is seen by the members of the aldermanic investigating committee in the granting of both permits. Each was secured by another corporation and then turned over to the Pugh interests. Each was secured in an unosterizatious manner and attracted no attention until the gigantic dock scheme finally was discovered by Adderman Foell and by him made the subject of a thorough investigation by the city council.

The special permit for the tracks, it was learned yesterday, was granted by the city council six months ago, or before the public hearing on the claims of the dock company. This fact is taken by many of those opposing the Dock grant to mean that there was some sort of anotherial approval given to the plan.

Paris, May 20.—Guglielmo Ferrero, the Italian historian, who recently visited the United States, is continuing in the Figure his analysis of the position occupied by American millionaires. Today he lays emphasis on the theory that these men feel themselves surrounded by public hostility and that consequently they are bound, like their prototypes in ancient Greece, to assume public responsibilities and vindicate themselves before the people. Signor Ferrero attributes much of the former hostility to John D. Rockefeffer to his

This would cover, roughly, nearly half of the entire field of unemployment, and, in fact, the worst part. The government, said Mr. Churchill. proposes to sim at a scheme of benefits rather lower than are now paid by the strongest trades unions. This would necessitate the raising of between fivepence and sixpence per man per week, the fund to be contributed jointly by the workman, the employer and the state. He was convinced that parliament would gladly apply its remaining strength to grappling with these hideous problems of social disorganization, which are marring the health and happiness of the country, and which if negicotted might affect its strangth and honor, in the world.

Both Parties in Plan

Mr Churchill's outlined plans dealing with the unemployment problem appear to be well received by both parties. The conservative Post describes them as "the most satisfactory and coherent plece of work that has yet found a place in the government program."

The labor exchange scheme will be national and voluntary and, it is estimated, will cost 51,000,000 yearly. The insurance scheme, which will not be introduced until 1210, will be compulsory and applied in the first instance only to the trades mentioned, involving about 2,280,000 workmen.

Following the German plan, insurance books will be issued to which stamps will be affixed each week. The worker on losing his employment will take the book to the nearest labor exchange, which will either find him work or pay him an allowance. Mr Churchill's outlined plans dealing

After several attempts to get the strike settled, Wayman said, Emil Glicka, president of the company, offered $200 and was told that he had been "assessed $1,500." He went away but some days later Andreas took the matter in hand and presented the $1,000 to Madden, under the circumstances alleged in the quotation from Wayman's opening speech.

Wayman took about a half an hour to state the case for the prosecution. The first witness called was Donald L.

Good Chance to Manipulate

The figures given above are those for the fiscal year. This gives the three-ball juggiers a second whack at manipulating figures by making out their reports for the school year and carrying over the big loans into the fiscal year reports. The school year ends on June 20, and the fiscal year on Dec. 31, and the opportunities are here offered which have been by no means neglected.

offered which have been by no means neglected.

The teachers' salaries in the city have not been increased. There has been no appreciable improvement in the school buildings. A school principal was complaining only a week ago that the Graham school was about to fail down unless it was attended to at once and that the old trap was really dangerous. At the same time the school rooms have been crowded to the ntmost, 54 pupils being the rule in a room where 42 pupils were the rule under the Dunne board.

Dunne figures of 190s and most of the has gone into jamitor's increases, where increases were made.

The Busse board has succeeded in nullifying the civil service law completely by the "probation act." under which a man may be summarily dismissed illegally, by the school management committee for almost any offense without trial. This helps some in getting henchmen of the Schneider-Busse regime into jobs as janitors, engineers, etc.

A careful perusal of the report of Auditor Custer leaves one as much in the dark as ever as to where the enormous difference between the Dunna and Busse administrations in the public school fund is to be located.

Organizer Is Back After 3 Months' Hard Work in Nebraska and Iowa

John Collins, the well-known Socialst lecturer and organizer, is back in chicago after three months of hard work in Omaha, South Omaha, Neb. and Council Bluffs, Iowa, the tri-cities that have shown such an enormous recent Socialist growth.

Collins brings nothing but good new; about these three cities and highly praises the Socialist leaders there. He says they get out as much literature as possible every Sunday morning, distrib-uting it from house to house.

Omaha Socialists in Gain

"During the last campaign, and for the first time in the history of Omaha, the Socialists had a full ticket in the ield, and while they had quite a figh on hand with Jim Daiman, the cowboy mayor, and twelve union men on the old party tickets, the Socialists gained mayor, and twelve union men on the old party tickets, the Socialists gained 35 per cent over the last election.

"The Socialists printed 30,000 pieces of literature during the clip campaign, and not one piece was left over on election night. Though they did not elect a man, there was a big celebration after the election on account of the great increase. The entertalment was held or May 6, two days after election. It was a great success.

"Local Omahs has raised its membership from 20 to 100 in three months. It also formed a Douglas county central committee, which, I think, will be the making of the movement in that part of the state as there are several locals in the county which never were in touch with each other before. Preparations are now being made for the fall campaign."

It is possible that Collins will go back to Omaha to lend his aid in the fall campaign. Word comes from Omaha that he is needed, and Collins says he knows of ne other place where he vould rather work for Socialism.

would be the standing and wealth of the man who could successfully corner the oil supply of the world, for he openly and frankly said that he had always been in favor of the combinations called trusts.

There wasn't the demand for newspapers in those days that there is now, and the profits did not meet the requirements of young Rogers. In the town of Fairhaven, Conn., where he was born, there were members of his family who depended upon him for assistance. He needed a steady income and he found it in a processy store. He took a place as a delivery boy at 33 a week and board, He made the most of the board and sent the 33 home. For five years he remained in the employ of this grocer, advancing to the position of head clerk.

Drifts to Oil Fields

Then came the discovery of oil in Pennsylvanis, and in a little time New Bedford was as dead as a mining town that has been abandoned in a rush for new diggings. Young Rogers drifted to the oil fields. He had learned a thing or two about the oil trade in New Bedford and his knowledge was practical knowledge. He found profitable employment readily enough, and it was not long before he had a familiar personal acquaintance with the oil barrons. He was prolific of ideas for saving and marketing the product of the wrill and same of the ideas were so good that he was employed by one of the big operators to carry them out. This employment gave him confidence in himself and stimulated him to new endeavors. He suggested a scheme so stupendous that it almost stunned his employer—it was that the owners of all producing wells should pool their product and market it through one concern, he idea being to control the output, refines the cost of handling fix a uniform price for certain grades and stop competition.

BIG BENEFIT PICNIC

On June 27th there will be a grand benefit picnic in Riverview Park for the Chicago Daily Socialist and Neues Leben, the Chicago German Socialist paper. The management of these papers has secured most generous terms from the Riverview Park proprietors. The papers get 50 per cent of the proceeds of the sale of the first 2,000 tickets and 90 per cent of all over that amount.

The tickets are printed and ready to be put into the hands of any individual who will volunteer to sell them.

If you will help in this work call or write for them at the office of the Chi cago Daily Socialist, 180 East Washington street.

If the sale of these tickets is pushed with vigor between now and June 27 there is no reason why several thousand dollars may not be cleared for the papers. Push the sale of these tickets and report promptly, as all tickets have to be

Call a Constitutional Convention

The attempts to revive the charter only serve to expose the decaying character of the corpse. The effort to force a reactionary fundamental law upon the city of Chicago having been defeated by a referendum vote and the abortive effort to secure the enactment of those measures especially desired by the great capitalists having been wrecked in the legislature, the whole matter is now back where it was two years ago.

The charter convention, after having died once and been resurrected for a second death agony, seems at last to have recognized its defunct condition.

The ground is at last cleared for some really effective action. There is now the possibility of a constitutional convention for the state of Illinois.

If such a convention is finally held it will not be because the members of the privileged class of the state desire it, but because veals conditions that bear out the no special time off for lunch, that they they are forced to accept it as the only means of escape from the darkest pletures ever painted by the tangle in which they have involved themselves.

The present Illinois constitution was the expression of a society that rode in stage coaches. It is now the framework of a govern- room of the cotton mills. Mr. Hins ment run by the railroads. But the difference of a tery between these contending giants.

Government is but an organized expression of the industrial society in which it exists. A government which was formed in one industrial stage can but poorly fulfill its functions in another stage

The present constitution of Illinois is outgrown.

A constitutional convention to formulate a new one should be called at once. It can be called if the workers of Illinois will but the ruling class can escape from 'he dilemma into which it has been year the President is the guest of henor. forced by its own struggles.

That convention should be elected by proportional representation. Only in this way can the various interests be truly represented. The working class should be prepared to go to that convention with certain definite demands. It should demand the establishment of the most democratic government possible, embracing the initiative, referendum and recall. It should secure provision for complete municipal autonomy.

It should do away with the provisions in the present constitution which make an eight-hour law for women unconstitutional.

These are but suggestions of a beginning in the changes which can be secured in the fundamental law of Illinois if organized labor and the Socialist party carry on an effective agitation for that pur-

William Howard Taft is today the guest of the good people of Mecklenburg County, North Carolina.

It will be news to most Americans that a Declaration of Independence is demand it. It can be called now because it is the only way that even supposed to have been issued by a convention in that county on the 20th of May, 1775. Each year a celebration is held to commemorate that alleged event. This

He will be dined by the foremost citizens. The flower of the South will turn out to greet him, and he will doubtless deliver a masterly oration upon independence.

The Daily Socialist would like to suggest to Mr. Taft a few things worth eing while he is in Charlotte

When he sits down to the banquet he will find on one side of him Mr. E. B. pore; on the other side, Mr. D. A. Tompkins.

He might ask these gentlemen to show him two sights of the South. They know all about them, and think of them with pride.

One of them is the chain gang. At 4 o clock in the morning gangs of "nigrers' are turned out of prison. On their legs are heavy chains, and they march between guards armed with shotguns. At break of day they are set to work; time for your dinner party? I never over them stand two infamous slave drivers, who never allow a back to straighten.

In the county of Mecklenburg and thereabouts are scores and scores of coton mills. Mr. Tompkins and men who receive Mr. Taft own these cotton mills. Let Mr. Taft rise before dawn tomorrow morning, and stand at the gate of one of these mills. When the whistle blows he will find coming from all directions cut of the night heavy, brooding men, tired, anxious women, thinly clad, unkempt little girls, and frail, joyless little lads.

Children of five and six years he will see, and as one set comes to the fac tory, another set of the same hopeless, poverty-stricken beings will leave thet

He will find the schools starved. He will find children robbed of every heritage of childhood. He will find tender young life crippled and crushed and ruined in the cotton mills of Mr. Moore and Mr. Tompkins and his other fellow banqueters.

Listen, Mr. Tatt, steal away tonight from the banquet. Walk to one of the great mills. Pass along the stlent streets under the stars until you come to the bright lights of a gigantic, shaking, throbbing building. Sit out there in the night, and look at the lights from the thousand windows, and THINK of the bables watching and tending those great machines.

THE ROAD TO POWER

BY KARL HAUTSKY

CHAP. IV .- ECONOMIC EVOLUTION AND THE WILL

In opposition to the above conclusions the tevisionists claim that there is a much greater contradiction in Marx himself. As a thinker, they allege that he recognized no such thing as a free will, but expected everything to come from inevitable economic evolution, which moves on automatically, but that as a revolutionary fighter he sought in the strongest manner to develop wills, and to appeal to the volition of the proletariat. This proves Marx to be guilty of an irreconcilable contradiction between theory and practice, declare the revisionists, anarchists and liberals in closest harmony.

In reality Marx is guilty of no such contradiction. It is a product of the confusion of his critics—a confusion that is incurable, since it recurs again and again. It rests in the first place in the making of will and free will identical. Marx has never failed to recognize the significance of the will and the "tremendous role of human personality" in society. He has only denied the freedom of the will, something very different. This has been explained so often that it scarcely seems necessary to restate it here.

Furthermore, this confusion rests upon a most remarkable conception of the meaning of economics and economic development. All these learned gentleme seem to think that because this evolution proceeds according to certain definite laws it is automatic and spontaneous without the willing human personality. For them the human will is a separate element alongside of and above economics. It adds to the force and operates upon economics, "making otherwise" the things produced by economics. Such a view is only possible in minds that have only a scholastic conception of economics, that have gathered their ideas entirely from books, and that treat it curely intellectually, without the slightest vital conception of the actual economic process. Here, at least, the proletariat is superior to them, and in spite of Maurenbrecher and Eisner, is better capable of comprehending this process and its historic role, than the bourgeois theoretician to whom economic practice is foreign, or than the bourgeois practical man to whom every theoretical interest is foreign, and who has no conception of the necessity of understanding anything more of economics than is essential to successful profit

All economic theory becomes mere mental gymnastics when we lose sight of the fact that the motive force back of every economic event is the human will. Certainly not a FREE will, not a will existing by itself (Wollen an sich), but a PREDETERMINED (bestimmtes) will. It is, in the last analyses, the WILL TO LIVE which lies at the basis of all economics, which appeared with life as soon as it was gifted with movement and sensation. Every expression of the will is, in the last analyses, to be traced back to the will to live. Whatever especial forms this life impulse (Lebenswille) of an organism may take in individual cases depends upon the conditions of that life, taking the word condition in the widest possible sense, as including all the dangers and limitations of life, not merely the means of its sustenance. The conditions of life determine the character of its volition, the nature of its acts and their results.

This knowledge forms the starting point of the materialistic conception of history. But, to be sure, the simplicity of the relations, that must be explained in this manner in the less complex organisms, give place in higher organisms to conditions in which many intermediate members step in between the mere will to live and the manifold forms of its expression.

I cannot here undertake to carry this further. But a few suggestions may be given. The conditions of life of an organism are of a twofold nature—first, those that are continually repeated and that do not change in the course of many generations. A will developed by and adjusted to such conditions is strengthened both by inherited custom and natural selection. It becomes an instinct, an impulse which the individual fellows under all circumstances, even under extraordinary conditions where following it does not maintain and sustain life, but injures it, perhaps even leads to death. In spite of all this the basis of this will is still the will to live.

Alongside of those conditions of life that are constantly repeated there are also others that appear only seldom or in changed form. Here instinct fails, Here the maintenance of life depends fundamentally upon the possession of intelligence by the organism which will enable it to recognize a given situation and to adjust itself to it. The more an animal form lives in swiftly changing conditions of life the more its intelligence is developed. This is partly due to the fact that the organ of intelligence has greater demands put upon it and partly because the individuals with weaker intelligence are more quickly

Educational Contest

What is the ''class struggle''? It is the struggle between two great classes. What two classes?

The class that makes and the class that takes. In other words, the class that is ordinarily entitled "wage workery of production, work for a "wage" sion of this product, or its value, that or a "salary" for the other class which does own the said machinery. In its When man in the barbarian ages

At every election the people tell us at the ballot box just what they want, Do they want injunctions and no way, and the most vital, they are yet way, and the most vital, they are yet to be for Taft and the rest work? They vote for Tatt and the rest of the grafters and get it. In the sunny south they vote for Bryan, and Co-mer, and others, of the capitalist class, and get the same thing. When will the "class struggle" cease?

will no longer exist. What will become of it?
It will be absorbed by the working class, and will forever after be makers of wealths and not takers of wealth from their fellow men, except when a full equivalent is returned. How may we know in our own con-sciousness that these things are true? By using our brains, by studying history, by reading Socialism. This is the only way. This is the way to know. Scientific study will give you the power to reason, the ability to judge for yourself, the knowledge to enable you to determine between the fool who would not be the contract of the school of the state of the state of the second of the determine between the fool who would make you as hig a fool as himself; the knave who would deceive you for his own benefit; and the honest man who would argue with you to impart knowledge he may have and that you may have and he may need.

The "class struggle" should be the study of every wealth producer. Knowledge on this point is power. Read on the question yourself. Pass the information on to your neighbor. There is mation on to your neighbor. There is no thef from present industrial con-ditions till you know till your neighbor knows. SUMNER W. ROSE knows. Biloxi, Miss.

The Class Struggle

The class struggle is the struggle that exists between the two great classes into which mankind, everywhere, is divided—the class composed of those tion and distribution but do not possess the power nor inclination to use it; and the class composed of those who do not possess this property but must use it to exist. When the class that makes no longer votes into office members and lackeys of the class that takes; but instead, elects those of its own class to positions of power. In a word, when the working class becomes "class conscious" it will, by perfectly honorable methods, take over the machinery of production and distribution, and the capitalists class—the class that takes—will no longer extent. of wages. It is to the interests or the capitalists to give as small a portion or wages as they can force the workers to accept, and to the interests of the workers to secure as large a por-tion as they can force the capitalists to give. Arms are no longer used but use of lockouts and strikes; injunctions and boycotts. An instance of the moment is the strike of the lake seamer who are trying to force the owners of the lake vessels to give them larger wages.

Since the interests of the two classes are so diametrically opposed there can be no cessation of this struggle while be no cessation of this stru the two divisions of society can only be ended when the class that performs all labor owns the land and machinery with which it is performed. The working class today has the power through political action to secure the ownership of this property and through Socialism establish the co-operative use of it, and when they do so they will forever end this struggle—the struggle of the ages.
