While not providing for the complete demands of the strikers, the plan gives the poorest paid workers substantial increases and slight increases to the skilled workers. It also provides for a modified system of operation of the mills to cover, the demands of the strikers that the "speed up" system be abolished.

That strike leaders Ettor and Giovanniti, will be released on hail on the inivitative of the District Attorney is considered likely, thus eliminating one of the strongest demands of the strikers. Hota sides are working hard to force the settlement, and it was hoped the strike might be declared off by next Tuesday. The Strike Committee held an executive session today, and it was said that they expected to have the complete proposal of the mill owners late today or tomorrow.

Five arrests of strike pickets were made during the early hours today, and there were clashes between the police and strikers at the Arlington mills, and on the edge of the Common. About 8,000 strikers carticipated in the "endless chain" picketine, passing and repassing the mill districts, and urging the workers to join their ranks. A crowd of 400 at the Arlington mills was dispersed by the police reserves and two of the leaders were arrested.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—Six days of astounding testimony as to conditions at strike-ridden Lawrence resulted in the determination of the House Rules Committee today to recommend-a threefold probe.

The committee will frame a resolution for investigation of the cruelities to which strikers swore they were subjected by the Lawrence amunicipal authorities; of the question whether the constitutional right of personal freedom was not denied the workers, and of the operations of the Woolen Trust—its attitude toward labor, and its alleged alliance with the Lawrence municipal authorities.

Committeemen said a resolution for broad investigation of the Lawrence strike, to probe every dark depth of the strike-ridden city, would positively be reported to the House next week.

Taking of testimony from textile workers and Lawrence officials was concluded yesterday. Chairman Hentry, of the committee, was called to Texas by illness in his family. When he returns late next week the resolution for the House probe will be framed.

Levy Mayer, of counsel for the packers, sought to show the charges in the indictment against the packers had not been proved, and hence that the case should be taken from the jury.

"There can be no conviction of these ten defendants based on mere suspicion." said Mayer. The government must prove its case beyond a reasonable doubt. Undisputed proof shows that the Veeder arrangement was positively terminated in 1902, and there is no presumption that that arrangement was continued, but if there were such a presumption, the presumption of innocence would overcome it. WORLD'S COMMERCE IS DOUBLED IN 15 YEARS

WASHINGTON. March 8.— The world's international trade has doubled in value in the last fifteen years, and shows for 1914 a larger total than ever before recorded. The Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Commerce and Labor publishes each month the latest available data on the trade of each of the principal countries of the world, and in its annual volume a statement covering for a full year's period the trade returns of a still larger list of countries. The number of countries named in its month! table is about twenty-five, and in its annual table, over fifty, comparison of monthly figures which cover portions of the year 1911 indicated that the trade for those portions of the year for which figures are available shows an increase of hetween 5 per cent and 6 per cent over the corresponding neriod of last year.

These figures indicate that the international commerce of the world in 1911 aggregated approximately $35,500,000,000,000 against $30,000,000,000 in 1907, $24,000,000,000 in 1904, $20,000,000,000 in 1901, and $16,500,000,000 in 1806. These figures are in all cases a combination of both imports and exports for all the countries for which data are available, and since all articles exported from one country become the imports of some other country the value of the merchandise actually moved may be assumed to be approximately half the sum obtained by a totalization of the imports and exports.

Orange

Orange.

The Socialists of Orange got more than they bargained for at a sociable given Wednesday night in Temple of Honor Hall. A lively program had been arranged. There was music by the famous Bush family orchestra and Mrs. Killingbeck sang a number of solos, which were much appreciated. And the Socialist children played cames as only proletarian children cam. When their festivities were at their height it was whispered about that there were present two "children of the Lawrence strike." Everymnatelse was forsotten, and when, during a lull in the proceedings the chairman, Elliot Briscoe, swelled out his chest and mounted the platform, the youngest tot there knew that something was going to happen. And it did. Up onto the platform were led two children, with wonder and happiness written all over their faces. Them Chairman Briscoe swelled out his chest some more and made a red hot Lawrence speech. THE INDESTRUCTIBLE TRUST

Since the order of dissolution pronounced against the Standard Oil Company by the government the shares of that concern have increased in value almost a quarter of a billion dollars. The price of a single $100 share has now reached the tremendous figure of $890. some forty dollars higher than the highest figure ever before reached, $842 being paid for one share in the record year of 1901.

It might perhaps be erroneous to attribute this increase to the order of dissolution, but the fact that it has taken place, at least demenstrates that it is impossible to destroy the trusts by this method or even injure them in the slightest degree. The howl that has been going up for years from trust magnates against government attacks on business, and the accusation that these so-called "raids on prosperity" were responsible for evil business conditions, under these circumstances seem rather as sham cries of alarm to deceive the public into the belief that the trusts could actually be destroyed or at least injured and weakened.

And the same perhaps may be said of the eternal protests of the "trust-busters," that they had no intention in any way of injuring the business of the country. So far as the business of the country is conducted under the trust form, they were powerless in that re spect anyhow. There is nothing whatever to show that a single trust that has been proceeded against has suffered financial injury in consequence.

Nor has there been anything to show even in the slightest degree that the avowed object of "restoring competition" has been attained. On the contrary, the trust form has steadily grown and increased all the time, just as if no investigations or prosecutions had taken place.

Under these circumstances it is not surprising that the officials of the Standard Oil Company regard with indifference the report that their business is to be again "investigated" by the government.

But it is worthy of notice that they are exceedingly interested the reported intention of the German Government to monopolize petroleum industry in that country, and expressed their fear that tention might he carried out. One of their subsidiary Eubranches has issued a pamphlet to the public in which they o prove that the German Government could make no profit out monopoly anyhow, as they could only rely on the Balkan oil field as a source of supply, and the freight charges would make the oil dearer to them than the Standard product. A government monorolt supplanting their own is about the only thing a trust really
